UNITED STATES
DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE
BUREAU OF PLANT INDUSTRY

PLANT INDUSTRY
The Bureau of Plant Industry is the principal agency in the Department of Agriculture for the promotion of the plant industry of the United States. It is concerned with the introduction and distribution of new and improved plant varieties, the control of plant diseases and insect pests, and the conservation of plant resources.

The Bureau of Plant Industry is organized into several divisions, each of which is responsible for a specific phase of the plant industry. These divisions are:

1. Division of Plant Introduction and Distribution
2. Division of Plant Diseases and Insect Pests
3. Division of Plant Conservation

The Bureau of Plant Industry is also responsible for the collection and distribution of plant material for the purpose of research and education. It maintains a large collection of plant material, which is available to the public for study and reference.

The Bureau of Plant Industry is also responsible for the control of plant diseases and insect pests. It conducts research on the causes and effects of plant diseases and insect pests, and develops methods for their control.

The Bureau of Plant Industry is also responsible for the conservation of plant resources. It conducts research on the distribution and abundance of plant resources, and develops methods for their conservation.

The Bureau of Plant Industry is also responsible for the promotion of the plant industry of the United States. It conducts research on the uses and value of plants, and develops methods for their promotion.

The Bureau of Plant Industry is also responsible for the collection and distribution of plant material for the purpose of research and education. It maintains a large collection of plant material, which is available to the public for study and reference.
